SCHREIBER'S FURNITURE STORE

A Glance at the Inside of a Wide-Awake Establishment.

Oakland people, for some reason and by some means, have endeavored to convince themselves (and some of them have succeeded tolerably well in establishing that conviction) that in order to procure a good article of goods in whatever line; or an article of food, either, that it is better if it is purchased in San Francisco, even if they have to pay a higher price for it. And so they go over there and leave our Oakland merchants to eke out a precarious existence, when they could have just as well left their money on this side of the bay, and often better; for we could mention instances where men paid more for the same article in San Francisco than our home merchants ask for it. The TRIBUNE is pleased to see that a change for the better in this respect is gradually being brought about, and we hope the importance of circulating money at home will be more seriously considered by our citizens in future than it has been in the past. The fact that Oakland has just as fine an article of goods is instanced in the

FURNITURE HOUSE OF P. SCHREIBER.

It will apply as well in other branches, but we select Mr. Schreiber's at random, to illustrate our point. We yesterday paid a hasty visit to this mammoth establishment, and, through the kindness of Mr. Schreiber, were permitted to inspect the entire premises. These rooms are located, as everybody knows, at Nos. 1064 and 1066 Broadway, near Twelfth street. The ground floor is fifty by seventy-five feet in dimensions, in which is contained one of the finest, most complete and handsome lot of furniture it has ever been our pleasure to behold. Arrayed on the right side, as you enter, are the

of more elegant and costly description, while to the left of the spacious room is the more common kind. We observed specimens (for the whole store consists only of samples from the immense stock in reserve at Mr. Schreiber's manufactory,) of French walnut sets, of very handsome design; others again of laurel; still others of butternut, all exceedingly handsome, and ranging in price from $100 to $700. Here also are very elegant book-cases, side-boards, wardrobes, elagères, sofas, lounges, etc., etc., in endless variety, from a baby rocker to a $700 set. We were shown in this department being a corner wardrobe and dressing case combined. It consists of a fine walnut, marble-topped dressing case, with all the necessary conveniences for the toilet, while the mirror, in the centre, opens and discloses a spacious wardrobe. These are manufactured only by Mr. Schreiber. The price of one is $100. But the finest thing in this immense establishment is a parlor set of seven pieces, one sofa, two arm-chairs, and four small chairs, made up on exquisitely designed frames, the upholstery being ponceau satin and trimmed with bronze satin, making as rich and elaborate a set as was ever put together on this Coast. This set was made to order, for one of our wealthy citizens. It will be on exhibition for a few days in the large show window of Mr. Schreiber. In another window is something fine, in the shape of a 'bat-tree.' It is new in design, the mirror being some five feet high, and the racks having gold plated hooks, the whole elegantly ornamented. The price of this article is $175. We observed here, too, two other fine sets of chairs which we especially admired, upholstered in French brocatel of green and gold, and another in red and gold seemed too nice to sit down upon. The price of this set is $600. And Mr. Schreiber informed us that he is manufacturing an altogether new style of chair, made to order from photographs just received from the East, the price of which will be $700 per set. Among the cheaper furniture on the opposite side of the room we saw very pretty bed room sets painted handsomely in blue and gold and drab and gold. But we cannot dwell longer on this floor, which is literally stacked with lounges, chairs, tables, bedsteads, sofas, and a thousand other articles from floor to ceiling; for we have to take a look into the

SOMETHING NEW,

which is an immense manufactory, divided into two apartments, the whole being about 75x100 feet in extent. To the right, as you pass down stairs, is a large store room, wherein are stored lounges, chamber sets and spring beds and other larger samples of furniture. On the other side of this vast basement room is located

THE MANUFACTORY.

Here there are a number of men employed, making up furniture of every description, but principally upholstering. Some are engaged in preparing the filling for lounges, chairs, etc., from curled hair, pulp, excelsior, soap root, Orleans moss, and so on. One Chinaman we observed in an obscure corner renovating feathers and making them up into pillows. Other men were making spring beds, others upholstering chairs and lounges, the whole forming a busy scene, and one which, until yesterday, we did not know existed in our city. This establishment is truly an honor and a credit to Oakland. Everybody should visit it, if only to see those lovely parlor sets, luxurious easy chairs, camp, crinoline and reception chairs, or sit in royalty for a moment, at least, in the Sultan lounge.

Busted His Bugle.

This paper a few days ago remarked that the story of the disturbance at the Garibaldi Guards picnic, at Alameda on Sunday last, had taken the most fantastic turns and gyrations that any story ever had since the first big fish story was told. One San Francisco paper had it that a certain street lamp-lighter had been stabbed in the neck, and on his way home had died on the boat; another said the man's bugle had been busted by another man's bugle, and still another said that the lamp-lighter had died at his home on the night of the occurrence. Dame Rumor—the old fraud—had it that two men had been killed; one poked to death with a bayonet and the other had his skull broken by a muscien. It is astonishing how stories increase in size as they increase in circulation. Like a big snow-ball, they gather volume as they are rolled about by story-mongers. All there is to the Alameda picnic disturbance is that a couple of drunken Garibaldians got to quarreling, when one of them pricked the other slightly with his bayonet. Two men, named respectively Marina and Valergo, were arrested on a charge of having done the punching, and were yesterday examined before Judge Jayne, but no proof was advanced that these were the men, and so the Judge discharged them. And thus endeth a tale that never should have had a beginning.

Fall of Telegraph Pole.

At the junction of Broadway, San Pablo Avenue and Fourteenth street, is a telegraph pole to which wires are attached from the Western Union office, Police office, University and Mills' Seminary. It is held in position by a guy fixed in the vacant lot. Last night somebody drove against the guy and broke it, and the pole fell to the ground, dragging the wires with it.

THE COMING WOMAN.

Who is She, Where is She Going, and What does She Want when She gets There?

The latest sensation is the story of the woman who, it is said, is coming afoot, and will soon be here. She was to have arrived in Sacramento yesterday. It is said she left Kansas City, Missouri, some sixty days ago, in search of a truant or missing husband, who she thinks is somewhere in California. Whether she is impelled by love or hate, no one can tell, as she is very reticent in her manner. She has followed the railroad in her journey hither, and walked the entire distance, over 2,000 miles. Sometimes walking for four or five days together an average of thirty-four miles a day. She passed Truckee on the 4th, making no stop in that town. She has had frequent offers of rides on freight trains, the conductors of which long since got to know her by frequently passing her on their trips, but she appeared to have a horror of the cars. She is coarse in appearance, and, as may well be supposed, her features are as weather-beaten as those of a tarry old sailor. Her dress consists of a pair of Turkish trousers, made of duck, a hat, woolen sack, light shawl and stout shoes. Referring to her transit across Truckee, and the cause of her wonderful journey, the Republican says: "What will be the fate of that truant husband of hers, when she gets her hands fairly locked in his hair, it is not difficult to conjecture. Better would it have been for him had he never been born. There will not be rocks or mountains enough in California to cover him from her enraged sight." But perhaps it is not revenge that impels her footsteps. She may think that the husband of whom she is in search is sick and suffering, and needs her care and attention. Who knows? Not irreverently do we say it, the ways of woman, like those of the Lord, are past finding out. The Sacramento papers state that upon her arrival in that city she will be arrested by the police on the ground that she is insane. Now, in the name of the sex we all love, the TRIBUNE does most emphatically object. The policeman who arrests that woman, or the municipal authorities who permit her arrest ought to be cremated on the spot. What law exists by which travelers are compelled to patronize a railroad company if they do not feel disposed to do so? No; let her walk. Let her come on to Oakland. Oakland wants to see her. We want somebody to lionize. Vasquez has departed. Hatch has gone to Santa Cruz. Mrs. Pitts Stevens has retired to the shades of the sand hills. We have no hero nor heroine. Let her come, then. Stop her only when she undertakes to walk across the Pacific to China. Until then, everybody keep hands off and let her walk.

High School Vacancy.

The following applicants for the position in the High School, made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Sill, have been received by the Superintendent: C. H. Crowell, J. Wright, Leary, Robert E. Wenck, John McFadden, H. G. Kenne, P. K. Hill, A. E. Kellogg, A. F. Cravin, and J. Thornton Jones.

Omissions.

In our report of the promotions from the Middle Class of the High School, the name of Fred. Stratton was inadvertently omitted. The following omissions were made from the report of the Franklin School. Mary E. Augustus, Fifth Grade; John Gmy, Fourth Grade.

Another Teacher Necessary.

The Junior Class in the High School will number 75, besides those who will be admitted outside of promotions, and hence the appointment of an additional teacher will become necessary.

DRINKING FOUNTAINS.

The necessity for drinking fountains is a public one which the city ought to provide for. It would be a very nice thing if some philanthropist would open his heart and erect half a dozen of these conveniences in different parts of the city; but such public-spirited, benevolent persons are not numerous on this mundane sphere, and it will not do to leave the matter to private enterprise. Some very kind-hearted individual who owns a drinking fountain which he is willing to dispose of pro bono publico, has suggested a "Memorial Fountain," to be erected on some indefinite spot in commemoration of the temperance victory of the 30th ult. It is proposed to sell the fountain for three hundred dollars, which probably includes agent's commissions, etc., and the whole-souled generous public are invited to invest one dollar each and become stockholders. There is one feature that should be added to the proposed "monument" which would not only make it more attractive, but would be likely to promote contributions. A tablet or bulletin-board should be attached to the fountain, upon which, in bold characters, should be written the name of the subscribers—a photograph of each would be an additional attraction. By this simple means many would invest a dollar, who, if their charity were to be concealed, would pass by on the other side. No doubt the editor of the News would take one share, to be paid for in a half-column puff, and the Barbary Coast shyster who has bleated so much lately at the Local Option meetings would undoubtedly invest an entire fee of $2 50 for the purpose of having his name prominent before the public. What a holy cause that would be which men would engage in and labor for without attempting or hoping to reap pecuniary benefit! But the spirit of speculation pervades every calling and every cause—even the religion of Jesus Christ is not free from its contaminating influence. This same spirit suggested the "Memorial Fountain."

The City Council on Monday evening refused to order the legal notices—"notices to contractors," etc.—in both the News and Transcript, as has heretofore been done; but the aforesaid notices were doled out to each hungry concern alternately—one to the News and another to the Transcript, and so on to the end. It is gratifying to see with what exactitude the orders of the Council were obeyed. Each of the papers yesterday morning contained all of the advertisements. It would be interesting to know who furnished the copy and who countermanded the order of the Council. Of course the magnanimous and much abused members of the City Council will pay both papers for all the advertisements notwithstanding they were published exactly contrary to the instructions of that body.

A lad in Detroit, kept in the house by a lame leg, has trained a rat to come forth at his whistle, standing on his hind feet, roll over, leap through a hoop, and execute other feats. This, however, is nothing to the training of the family cat. Though she is the very inexorable foe of all the other rats, she will stretch herself out and permit the educated rat to jump over her. Twice a week the boy has an exhibition. Admission, five cents.

HOW TO MAKE BUSINESS.

No man can do business unless he deals in something that people want. Unless he has a clear field and no competition, he must not only have what is wanted, but must have it of the better quality, at a cheaper price, or serve it in a more satisfactory manner than his competitors, otherwise he will attract only his share of the trade. Every successful business man must secure more than his share. In trade it is important that the profits shall be fair, but as the markets are equally open to all, the quality of goods offered by one dealer may be as good as any other can afford at the same price, the style of serving customers therefore becomes the natural avenue through which to force an increased trade. Suppose, then, that the price at which goods are to be sold is a fair, full, market price, the quality the best, selected with care and always reliable; attention must now be paid to the appointments for the transaction of trade. Efficient assistants must be secured and trained to understand the full value of prompt dealing, ready and pleasant adjustment of errors and careful attention to all wants of customers.

The usual methods of attracting business are well known, and, to a certain extent, effective. Every man has a sign to show his name and trade. A handsome display of goods attracts casual observers. Better than these are the commendatory words of customers who have been served and pleased. A word in favor of a business house is often worth much. If one person's good report is worth something, the commendations of ten will be worth ten times as much, and of an hundred still more. Life is short, and it is every man's ambition to make a fortune. Every thing is sought which will tend to hasten the happy time when that fortune can be counted as made. Every man prefers to trade where he has formerly traded. The shrewd business man is therefore anxious to secure the first possible order from every man who has an order to give. The earlier the first order is secured the better prospect there is of making a regular customer at an early day.

A man intending to do business must first prepare himself to meet the requirements of his customers; next, he must let every possible or probable customer know that he is so prepared; and the TRIBUNE, with its five thousand daily readers, is the best medium for conveying the information to the people of Oakland.

The Pacific of this week, in speaking of the election in East Oakland, says:

"Marvelous is lady force! Well done, Brooklyn! Our reports say that there were five hundred women in the streets persuading the men to vote against license. There was a decisive majority of eighty-four in a poll of a little over six hundred votes. The decisiveness of the result is largely due to the praying and working of the week previous."

Good! We now and here ask the prayers of all the churches on next Sunday in behalf of F. S. Spaulding, O. N. Snook and D. T. Knox, that they may be impressed with their responsibilities before the law.

"Put a beggar on horseback and he will ride to the devil." Establish a mendicant upon the uppermost section of a charger, and he will transport himself to Apollyon.

Patience is a flower that grows not in every one's garden.

Tem Meetings.—The Adventists still continue their meetings in the tent, opposite the City Hall, Oakland, every evening and Sundays. They have also pitched another tent in Brooklyn, near Union Hotel, where services are being held each evening and Sundays. The public are cordially invited to attend. Wetter Late than Never.

The Transcript of this morning contains the astounding announcement that Tim Suden intends erecting a drinking fountain in front of his store, in East Oakland. Why, my dear fellow, we took a drink of water at that new fountain a week ago, and so could you have done so if that were your drink. Read the Tribune more carefully, and keep posted.

New Millinery Opening.

The formal opening of Mrs. Cunningham's new millinery store on Broadway, east side, between Ninth and Tenth streets, announced to take place to-day, has been postponed till Saturday next. On that day Mrs. Cunningham will throw open her store to the criticising gaze of the ladies of Oakland, and she invites them to call in on that day and see her stock of Parisian millinery and fancy dry goods. She desires to make the acquaintance of the ladies, and invites all to come. Remember the day—Saturday next.

Cruelty to Animals.

Last evening, about six o'clock, George Morse, son of Sheriff Morse, met with a mishap, from which he barely escaped with his life, although he received no serious injury. He was riding a gray horse up Broadway at a rapid gait—almost a dead run—and in attempting to turn the corner of Twelfth street the horse's feet, striking on the plank crosswalk, slipped, and animal and rider fell flat to the ground. Young Morse received a few slight abrasions of the skin upon his face and the poor horse had a leg broken. The unfortunate brute (the horse) was subsequently killed. Young Morse is noted for being a reckless rider. He is a splendid horseman and takes much pride in exhibiting his equestrian feats upon the streets, sometimes to the terror of nervous old ladies and the wonder and admiration of young ladies and romantic misses. He seems inclined to presume upon his father's position, and it is barely possible that if he were the son of a greaser, and should cavort about town in so reckless a manner he would speedily find himself in the meshes of the law. Notwithstanding his parentage Georgie should be admonished.

Where's the Opera House.

Now that the places of general resort for the young—the saloons—are to be closed up, and places of amusement become absolutely necessary to existence in Oakland, is it not an opportune occasion to agitate the somewhat chronic idea of an opera house in Oakland? Where is the capitalist that has the foresight to see that a house of amusement, combining all the innocent games and including a free reading room to attract, in some convenient locality, would be a paying institution? Some enterprising man could, if he would, combine in one building all the requisites which now become essentially necessary to social life in Oakland. Who will it be.

Had It, Badly.

We yesterday afternoon observed two policemen taking a man who seemed to be very full of "Local Option" up Franklin street, in the direction of the City Hall. We asked the nearest officer, Harry Summers, who he was, what he was, and what he had done, but that preserver of the peace did not deign to answer our questions, fearing perhaps lest we were a Local Optionist and would endeavor to rescue the prisoner. The Police Court proceedings in another column, will indicate the particulars which we desired to know of the officer.

Teutonic Vengeance.

The Chronicle of this morning contains an article transferred into its columns from the German Demokrat, of San Francisco, which for downright lying and deslattering insult and meanness manifested against the women of Oakland and Brooklyn, resulting from the active part they took in the recent elections, surpasses anything we have ever seen or read. We don't believe that there was shouting of "Our God is Marching On!" nor pinning on of mottoes to the coats of voters "For License" described in the foul article alluded to.

Another Slander.

Yesterday's Bulletin contains this item about Oakland. "Fruit has been jumping, corns grow in the night, and the youngsters kick off the bed-clothes." Now, we protest against such insinuations. We don't believe a word of it. Who saw fruit jump? Whose fruit jumped? Whose corns grew in the night time? And whose youngsters kick off the bed-clothes? How can that hitherto respectable sheet—we mean the Bulletin, not the bed sheet—thus cast continually and disgrace upon our fruit, our bunsions, and our little ones? O, for shame. Bulletin!

POLICE COURT.

There was a hull in the hitherto lively state of the Police Judge's Court this morning. One fellow was fined $6 for imbibing in an over-dose of benzine.

Anthony Lewis was arraigned before the tribunal on a charge of grand larceny, for stealing a watch, arrested by officers Wilson and Blake. Case set for to-morrow.

John Wilson is charged with robbery, and will be tried to-morrow at one o'clock.

The ever-present (in our Police Court) Jose Fernandez, is in custody again, charged with threats against the life of his spouse. The case was continued.

Competent Instructor.

Miss Temple, the assistant teacher in the High School, has shown that she possesses great executive ability. In the absence of Mr. McCheaney and the transfer of Mr. Sill to the University, the work of summing up the results of the examinations, and all the details incident to the closing of the school, have devolved upon her. She has been equal to the occasion, and we are sure that the school officers fully appreciate her.

W. D. Fountain

Removal.

The old tumble-down structure which has so long disfigured and disgraced the corner of Broadway and Fourteenth street, in which was a saloon, has been put upon wheels and toted off. We have not learned what is to take its place. Mr. Armes formerly received $45 per month rent for the ground on which this saloon stood; he has been persecuted to this amount by the removal.

University Theses.

At two o'clock to-morrow, at the President's lecture-room at Berkeley, papers will be read by University students as follows: John E. Budd, of Stockton, subject, "The Statesman versus the Politician;" James C. Perkins, San Francisco, "The Prospective Literature of California;" Joseph C. Rowell, San Francisco, "The Superiority of Ancient Art;" Simon C. Scheeline, San Francisco, "The Rise and Fall of the Macedonian Power;" William Turkington, San Francisco, "Technical Education in California."

Too Smart for the Quaker.

The following story we heard told many years ago, and give it now as nearly as we can remember it, as showing the result of resorting to law, better than the story of the cow which was milked by the lawyer while the neighbors were tugging at each end of the animal for its possession. A Quaker having lost a quarter of mutton by a lawyer's dog, repaired to the office of the lawyer, and said, "I have come to ask a piece of thy advice. Suppose a dog carried off a leg of mutton from me where do I look for pay, to the dog or his owner?" "Oh," said the man of the quill, "to the owner of the dog, he is responsible for any damage his dog does you." Said Broadbrim, "These owes me seventy-five cents." "Ah!" said the lawyer, "then my dog did the mischief? Well, here is the money." The face of the Quaker expanded with a smile at his shrewdness in forestalling the opinion of the lawyer, and he was making his exit from the office, when he was brought to a halt by the lawyer saying: "I have a small bill against you, my friend?" "Ah! for what?" said the Quaker. "For advice in the dog case—two dollars," was the reply. This was a dose. It being strictly legal, and the lowest fee in the calendar for advice, there was no dodging, so the money was forked over, and Shadbelly departed a wiser if not a better man.

Evils of Intermarrying.

A sad case of the evils of intermarrying came to our notice some time ago. It is said it cost the poor fellow his life. He told it himself—not his suicide, but his story of conjugal intricacies—and we give it in his own words: "I married a widow who had a grown up daughter. My father visited my house very often, fell in love with my step-daughter and married her. So my father became my own son-in-law, and my step-daughter became my own mother, because she was father's wife. Some time afterward my wife having a son—he was a brother of my step-mother. My father's wife, i. e., my step-daughter, also had a son; he was, of course, my brother, and in the meantime my grandchild, for he was the son of my daughter. My wife was my grandmother, because she was my mother's mother. I was my wife's husband and grandchild at the same time. And as the husband of a person's grandmother is the grandfather, I was my own grandfather." After fully convincing himself of the immutability of the above facts, the victim in a fit of despondency, cut his throat with a boiled turnip.

Little Johnny wanted to go to church. His mother was afraid he would make a noise, but his father said: "Johnny knows better than to make a noise in church." So he went. He kept very still till the last prayer. By that time he had grown tired of sitting still and was standing on the pew cushion, with his back towards the pulpit. When the lady who was sitting in the next seat bowed her head for prayer, Johnny thought she was crying. He leaned over and said to the lady in a tone that he meant for a whisper, but which was only too plainly heard: "Poor lady! What is matter? Do you stomach ache?"

A lot of rats were found the other day in a hoghead that had been left open in a store at Exeter, Mass. The store cat having been notified, climbed the edge of the hoghead, but, after surveying the situation, jumped down and ran out the door, reappearing with another cat. They looked at their foes and retired, coming back with a third cat. They now seemed satisfied with their force, and made an attack, jumping into the hoghead. The cats had, however, miscalculated the force of their enemy, and two were killed, the other being taken out in season to save its life.
